Thank You!

The Jail Industries Board takes pride in presenting the 2001 Offender Work Report. This high quality and comprehensive information could not have been compiled without the active support of city and county jail staff from all over Washington.

The same staff people who gathered information for the Board have much bigger and tougher jobs to do. They are helping offenders learn new ethics and skills. They are saving taxpayers money as they supervise offenders working on behalf of the public. They are providing opportunities for offenders to give back to their communities through non-profit community service organizations. Every day brings new operational and fiscal challenges---challenges that correctional staff meet and conquer under difficult working conditions.

On behalf of the entire Jail Industries Board, thanks again to the corrections staff who helped with the report, and who are helping keep our communities safe and productive.

Sincerely,

Jill Will
Executive Director

2001 Offender Work Report

Mission of the Jail Industries Board

Provide statewide leadership and technical assistance to establish, develop, and maintain jail industries through partnerships with labor, business, victims, community, and government which promote:

- ◆ Victim compensation and restitution
- ◆ Reduced cost of incarceration
- ◆ Reduced victimization and recidivism
- ◆ Meaningful work experience and work ethics
- ◆ Public service through offender labor

2001 Offender Work Report

Executive Summary

Expanded Reporting

The Jail Industries Board has added information and updated the title of its 2001 report. As in past years, the main body of the report provides a statewide review of the work performed by offenders housed in city and county jails. This year, the report shows work performed by offenders sentenced to community service hours in lieu of incarceration as a separate data element. As demand for bed space and offender accountability grows, alternatives like community service become more and more important components of local correctional systems.

Nineteen city jails provided information. Four other city jails, all short-term holding facilities, reported no work available. All 39 counties reported inmates working in 2001. Of the eight Native American tribes operating correctional facilities, only the Yakama Nation reported work hours this year. In total, offenders worked 3.6 million labor hours. At the state minimum wage of $6.72 per hour, these hours represent $24 million in value returned to Washington taxpayers.

Offsetting Costs of Incarceration

Three-fourth of inmate labor, 75% of all hours reported, offset costs of incarceration in Washington jails. Inmate workers provided essential services to keep daily operations going within correctional facilities. Work totaled 2.7 million labor hours.

The most common jobs held by inmate workers were in:

- laundry service—49 facilities
- food service—48 facilities
- janitorial work—45 facilities

Other common tasks included:

- general labor—23 facilities
- vehicle washing/detailing—17 facilities
- inmate uniform repair—13 facilities
- truck loading/unloading—13 facilities
- landscaping—10 facilities

Providing Services for Government Agencies

Inmate workers provided 769,485 labor hours to a wide variety of government agencies, representing 22% of all hours worked. Most work was done by minimum-security offenders leaving the jail to work off-site, and by offenders performing community service hours in lieu of incarceration.

2001 Offender Work Report

Law enforcement agencies, fair boards, parks and recreation departments, and maintenance departments received the most help from inmate crews. The most common jobs were:

- litter pickup—40 agencies
- vehicle washing/detailing—30 agencies
- grounds maintenance—29 agencies
- general labor—26 agencies
- fairgrounds maintenance—24 agencies
- parks maintenance—26 agencies
- courthouse maintenance—22 agencies

Working for Community Organizations

City and county jails reported 105,579 labor hours directed to not-for-profit community organizations. This total does not reflect hours that were reported under another category. Several jails noted that labor hours statistics reported for their jail operations also included hours donated to community groups. Working inmates benefited 105 different community groups in 2001, and performed 36 different kinds of tasks. The most commonly reported jobs were:

- general labor—11 organizations
- food bank assistance—8 organizations
- building refurbishment—7 organizations

Communicating with Stakeholders

Cities and counties are struggling to deal with shrinking budgets while trying to maintain services. Some communities may seek to close that budget gap by using offenders to do more work. Expanding offender work programs is an option - one that must be carefully discussed up front and planned for ahead of time. Public employees, businesses, labor groups, and government officials all have a stake in this dialogue. Local jail industries advisory groups can play a critical role in defining the appropriate scope of offender labor. Now, more than ever, everyone needs to be part of the balancing act.
